Geocinema (aka Solveig Suess & Asia Bazdyrieva)
Geocinema (aka Solveig Suess & Asia Bazdyrieva) is a collective that explores the possibilities of a “planetary” notion of cinema. The surface of the planet is documented in ever-greater detail by the increasing proliferation of images captured by individuals and technologies today, and by the collection of data on different scales. Geocinema’s research reflects both the architecture and infrastructure behind this network, which to it constitutes a decentralized moving-image apparatus. It also engages with the intersection between corporations and governments that feed into and extract from this widely dispersed network of footage. Solveig Suess is a design researcher and filmmaker based in Berlin. Asia Bazdyrieva is an art critic and art historian based in Kiev.

Woodcut Wavement
Woodcut Wavement is a nomadic woodcut workgroup/working method. The group members carry some of the necessary equipment to different localities, and connect with local communities to collectively make woodcut printings based on the issues they are working on, the local materials, and human power. The woodcut workshop is in collaboration with communities in different localities by the principle of mutual-aid or mutual-remuneration.

1 The ISGS participants were invited to prepare an annotated list of collectives. Please note, this is not an exhaustive list of collectives.
Australia

The Hyperbolic Crochet Coral Reef

Spearheaded by artist and biologist Helle Jorgensen. Coral colonies are crochet from yarn they create from trash that washes up along the shoreline. Communities around the world have joined her in this work creating their own coral colonies using her method of hyperbolic crochet, a mathematically driven stitching technique. This work speaks to both human created catastrophe, but also to the power of collective creativity to regenerate ecologies.

Cambodia

Stiev Selapak

Founded in 2007 by Khvay Samnang, Lim Sokchanlina and Vuth Lyno, as a continuation of the White Building’s modernist artistic struggle against Pol Pot, interested in both artistic mediums as well as knowledge sharing. They run Sa Sa Art Gallery and offer residencies to connect local young artists to global arts and expand international connections with Cambodia. In addition to creating resources for artists, they attend to their local community as well through online archives and databases to capture the history of their neighborhood.

Indonesia

Irwan Ahmett and Tita Salina are an artist duo from Jakarta, Indonesia. Working together since 2010, their tactical interventionist approach is developed in response to their experience of living in Jakarta, a megacity of 15 million people fraught with political power struggles. The Ring of Fire (2014–ongoing) brings together for the first time the most significant works realised by the artists, either together or individually, since the inception of the project. In geography, The Ring of Fire denotes the volcanic belt and the collision zone of tectonic plates running around the edges of the Pacific Ocean, a deadly area where the majority of the world’s earthquakes and eruptions occur. Evoking the invisible geological kinships that flow under the oceans and lay deep in the earth’s crust, this geologically unstable territory demarcates a field of artist inquiry for the issues of social injustice, political struggles, colonial histories, and environmental crises encountered along erratic routes that stretch from Indonesia to New Zealand, from Taiwan and South Korea to Japan.

Marjinal

Marjinal are a punk band based in Srengsengsawah on the outskirts of Jakarta. Formed in 1997, for the past 19 years they have created a uniquely Indonesian brand of punk, combining music, art and activism. Building a large and enthusiastic following and networks of like-minded punks, Marjinal have stayed committed to the punk ethic of ‘Do It Yourself’, avoiding the traps and temptations of commercialism and encouraging others to create and distribute their own music and art through free ukulele, silk-screening and woodcut workshops.

Serrum Studio
Serrum Studio is a Jakarta-based art collective that introduces the notion of collective as a school in order to address educational issues related to the effectiveness and quality of knowledge sharing. The name of the collective “Serrum” derives from the pronunciation of “share” and “room” meaning a sharing space. Founded by a group of fine arts graduates at Jakarta State University in 2006. Driven by research and collaboration, they aim to engage with members of the public through a range of participatory and activation events in the form of such as exhibitions, workshops, discussions, installations, urban interventions as well as comic books and graphic narratives.

The PERSAGI, Persatuan Ahli-Ahli Gambar Indonesia, or Union of Indonesian Painters
Established in 1938 with the goal of depicting local people and their viewpoints, in stark contrast to a setting of colonialism. It’s best known artist, S. Sudjojono, is recognized as sparking a whole movement of modern art in Indonesia as focused on its people, glorifying their history, and their struggle for freedom.

Japan

Ogawa Pro
Founded in the late ‘60s by Japanese documentary filmmaker Ogawa Shinsuke. The group collectively documented postwar student struggles and the Sanrizuka protests, most notably with the film, “Narita: Peasants of the Second Fortress”, which captures the local people fighting to prevent the erasure of their homeland, by the construction of the Narita airport. They aimed for independent and collective decision making, finding new models for making and funding work, and creating alternative venues to connect with new audiences.
Singapore

Film Community SG
An online collective for Singaporean independent filmmakers to share opportunities and ask for help. Founding member, and acclaimed documentary maker Tan Pin Pin, has worked collectively for film advocacy and screening rights. Her film, “To Singapore with Love” was denied rating by the Media Development Authority, effectively banning it from screening in Singapore. She was on a team that lobbied the Singapore Film Commission to include documentaries and films with artistic and cultural merit in the New Talent Feature Grant Scheme.

The Migrant Ecologies Project
Founded by Lucy Davis, who was also a founding member of the School of Art Design and Media, at Nanyang Technical University, The Migrant Ecologies Project works to facilitate transdisciplinary collaboration on “art ecology and more than human connections”. Works look into migration and memory, by studying plants and animals, and art and visual culture, in primarily Southeast Asia. Their “Stories of Wood” uses art, objects, and oral histories to tell of the rapid shift of landscape, in conjunction with how we live in it. Their “{if your bait can sing the wild one will come} Like Shadows Through Leaves”, on Tanglin Halt, one of Singapore’s oldest social housing estates, now undergoing redevelopment, and it won the International Federation of Film Critics Award, at Oberhausen International Short Film Festival.
About - The Migrant Ecologies Project

The Artists Village
Rooted in performance and new media, with the intention to “foster and develop an increased consciousness of the importance of the arts” and “their contribution to the Singaporean society”. The Artists Village was founded by Teng da Woo, in 1988 as a way to reclaim local identity and culture in response to the rapid development and economic growth of that time, as well as a separation from postcolonial histories.

Sociedad de Carne y Hueso
A performance community focused on reinterpreting Japanese Butoh, the dance of darkness, founded by Aura Arreola. They create embodied experiences by way of immersive performative experiences concerned with movement, sensory, memory, and imagination. Manifiesto | Sociedad de Carne y Hueso

Myanmar

Thuma Collective
Thuma Collective is a collective set up by a group of female photographers in Myanmar in 2017 with a goal to tackle the under-representation of women in photography. As the only female photographers’ group in Myanmar, it plays a significant role in creating a safe space for them to share resources and provide mutual support to one another. By building a supportive and learning community, it not only increases visibility of Myanmar’s female photographers’ work in international festivals and markets, but also actively challenges gender stereotypes and inequality through visual storytelling.

The Philippines

Pineapple Lab
Pineapple Lab, located in a historic neighborhood of Barangay Poblacion in Makati City, is a creative hub for performance and art exhibitions. Since its establishment in 2015, it has collaborated with many acclaimed artists to produce the Fringe Manila with a key focus on vulnerable and marginalised people in the society, in particular the lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBTQ) communities. Underpinned by the values of openess, selflessness, and honesty, it not only offers a safe space for self-expression and artistic experimentation for LGBTQs, but also makes their work more accessible to a wider audience.
