Revisiting Sugarlandia

In the historiography of the late colonial period issues concerning the interaction between colony and metropole, and the complex relationship between the colonial bourgeoisie and indigenous people, have been central to the scholarship. This relationship was long understood through largely constructed racial, ethnic, and cultural binaries. Only recently, scholars have begun to question these and challenge the ambitions of the imperial mindset.

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

Revisiting Sugarlandia

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

Revisiting Sugarlandia

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

Revisiting Sugarlandia

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

Revisiting Sugarlandia

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

Revisiting Sugarlandia

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

Revisiting Sugarlandia

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

Revisiting Sugarlandia

[Text]

EUROPEAN CAPITAL AND SUGAR PRODUCTION IN JAVA

Arthur van Schaik

In chapter six, Arthur van Schaik and Roger Knight delve into the dynamics of the colonial European/Dutch community in Yogyakarta. They argue that the local perception of the relationship between the colonial authorities and the local elite was an important element in understanding the behaviour of the colonial authorities. They also conclude that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.

They argue that the local elite had a significant influence on the development of the sugar industry in Java.